What is your position on the application

Position

I neither support or oppose the application

Notes

I support the culling of feral cats and if the poison has been determined to be the best method then I support that. It's important to understand what risk there is to domestic animals. Has anyone researched this? If people's pets suffer or die, this will be ultimately counterproductive to the culling effort. If the recommended 3km radius is too large and a smaller radius is acceptable, presumably this can be a blanket change, not just an exception for this programme. Conversely, if it is 3km for a good reason (to avoid collateral damage) then it should be retained and another method of culling used.
