Notes

The 'pupu springs' as they are commonly known, are renowned for their purity and clarity. They also represent an increasingly rare environment in NZ - one of fresh, clean water. As such, the water of the springs should be conserved, and protected from the outputs of high-density farming. Such outputs are detrimental to water quality in general and to the springs in particular. As kaitiaki of this land, we should be retaining its purity and value, not degrading it for the short-term profit of intensive farmers.
